HARBURG PROJECT ACTIVITIES 1986 – 2005

HARBURG SYNAGOGUE ACTIVITIES 1986 – 1992

Harburg Project was initiated in 1986 by Rolf Hofmann when purchasing the former Synagogue of Harburg in Bavaria, which by then had no more historic interior after it had been transferred into an office building around 1965. In 1989 Rolf Hofmann started the organisation of this Synagogue as a Cultural Center which soon became one of the outstanding cultural highlights beyond local significance, offering lectures, exhibitions, workshops and meetings of all kinds for an auditorium of up to one hundred people. In 1992 the Cultural Center came to an end caused by lack of support by local authorities (in 1995 the building was sold to a practitioner, who still lives there with his family).

GENEALOGICAL RESEARCH ACTIVITIES 1992 – 2005

1992 was the beginning of Jewish genealogical research activities by Rolf Hofmann under the label "Harburg Project" after having been invited by Dr Wilfried Sponzel (then archivist at Harburg Castle) to study the holdings of the Princely Archives dealing with a dozen Jewish settlements in the area of the former County of Oettingen. Dr Sponzel's support was very generous and so the results of the research activities at Harburg Castle became very special. Later Dr Sponzel moved to the Noerdlingen City Archives, where he accompanied Harburg Project activities in the Noerdlingen area with the same generosity as before in Harburg.

SUMMARY OF RESEARCH ACTIVITIES OF HARBURG PROJECT SINCE 1992

The organisation of headstones cleaning at Jewish cemeteries in Harburg (complete), Moenchsdeggingen (complete) and Wallerstein (ca 20 headstones) led to a photo documentation. A small part was published in a booklet on Harburg Jewish cemetery (black and white photos by Mario Jacoby). Moenchsdeggingen and Wallerstein (color fotos by Rolf Hofmann) were not published so far.

Another basic activity was (and still is) the transcription of taxlists (18 th century) and vital records (19 th century) of the former Jewish communities at Pflaumloch, Wallerstein, Oettingen, Hainsfarth, Harburg, Moenchsdeggingen, Ederheim and Noerdlingen (this Jewish community only started in 1870).

Based on tax lists and burial lists the next step was compiling family sheets of many hundreds of Jewish families (Noerdlingen alone resulted in 170 family sheets, in the meantime also published at Harburg Project's website www.alemannia-judaica.de/harburgproject.htm).

The family sheets finally resulted in episodes which were published in local newspapers and through Harburg Project's website, which was created through the friendly help of Dr Joachim Hahn, author of Alemannia Judaica website. Some of these larger episodes (like Wallerstein Rabbinate, Liebmann/Rheingold Brewery, actress Therese Giehse, Saenger Brothers etc) were first offered to an audience in lectures for the Donauwoerth Volkshochschule (people's college) and cultural organisations as "Rieser Kulturstage" (seated in Noerdlingen).

Besides that various tours were offered by Harburg Project on Jewish history throughout the area of the historic County of Oettingen. Right now there will be three events on 4 Sep 2005: the Jewish cemeteries in Oettingen and Noerdlingen plus the newly restored Mikwe in Moenchsdeggingen (the interior still under reconstruction).

The enormous amount of vital records collected during the last 13 years enables Harburg Project to help Jewish families worldwide in their effort to trace the roots of their families in this area around Noerdlingen which once was home for a dozen Jewish communities.

Another topic of Harburg Project was (and still is) the composition of gravelists with additional family history information. The Wallerstein gravelist is based on the original list compiled by teacher Stein around 1890 (in Hebrew), the Noerdlingen gravelist was compiled with the generous help of Dr Wilfried Sponzel (chief archivist at Noerdlingen City Archives). Both lists have become part of Harburg Project's website.

Last but not least to mention would be Harburg Project's oversea's activities with two Jewish cemeteries in New Orleans (Hebrew's Rest) and New York (Salem Fields in Brooklyn). The amazing amount of headstone inscriptions indicating people with family roots in the area around Noerdlingen led to a large collection of headstone fotos. Those of New Orleans were not published. The Salem Fields collection was presented twice to the public with exhibitions at Laupheim castle, at Hainsfarth Synagogue and at the Jewish-Christian Museum in Cronheim (Franconia).

Next to come will be gravelists of Oettingen and Steinhart, based on former studies by Mario Jacoby (Kfar Haroeh in Israel). Their publication is planned for 2006. This publication will include 19 th century vital records of Steinhart.

Harburg Project may be contacted by e-mail through harburgproject@aol.com or by writing a letter to Rolf Hofmann, Libanon Strasse 79, 70186 Stuttgart (Germany).

AUWÖRTHL. ZEITUNG

Voll besetzt war die ehemalige Harburger Synagoge beim Vortrag von Gernot Römer. Die Veranstaltung im Rahmen der Harburger Bildungswoche war gleichzeitig die „Eröffnung“ des frisch renovierten Hauses. Künftig steht der Saal für kulturelle Zwecke zur Verfügung.

DZ-Bild: Sisulak

Der 46jährige gebürtige Stuttgarter hat sich, wie er selbst erzählt, nie in Büros wohlfühlt. Nach dem Architekturstudium arbeitete er in vielen Bereichen. Der Großstadt Stuttgart hat er „wegen der unnötigen Ansammlung von A“s“ den Rücken gekehrt und d. „eschauliche Leben im kleinen Städtchen Ha. burg gesucht.

Verlassenes Gemäuer

Zufällig bot sich dort 1986 die leerstehende Synagoge. „Ich weiß nicht einmal genau, warum ich sie gekauft habe“, erzählt er jetzt, nachdem aus dem verlassenen Gemäuer wieder ein Haus mit Atmosphäre geworden ist.

Als die jüdische Kultusgemeinde Harburg 1936 aufgelöst wurde, bezog Jahre später ein Ingenieurbüro das geschichtsträchtige Gebäude, das einst auf Weisung von Fürst Albrecht Ernst II. errichtet wurde. In das Gotteshaus wurde eine Decke eingezogen, um es gewerblich nutzen zu können.

Dezentler Hinweis

Aus dem Chefzimmer, Sekretariat und Zeichenraum drei Meter über dem Saalgeboden ist nun ein Saal geworden, der nicht mehr an die nüchterne Geschäftswelt erinnert: Mit hellen Holzbalken an der Decke und dunklen Fliesen. Ein aus Lindenholz gearbeiteter siebenarmiger stilisierter Leuchter – die „Menora“ – ist an der Stelle im Osten angebracht, wo sich einst der Thorschrein Harburg. Noch wenige Stunden vor dem Vortragsabend sah es in der ehemaligen Harburger Synagoge noch nicht so feierlich aus: Es hingen keine kunstvoll zusammengestellten Blumengebinde in den Spitzbogenfenstern, die rotbraunen Fliesen im Obergeschoß waren alles andere als sauber, überall lag noch Werkzeug. Zwei Tage und Nächte am Stück hat Wolf Hofmann zusammen mit seiner Mutter und Freundin gearbeitet, um den Saal rechtzeitig der Öffentlichkeit vorstellen zu können. Vor drei Jahren hat Wolf Hofmann die leerstehende Synagoge gekauft und mit viel Eigeninitiative die Renovierung begonnen. „Ich fühle mich eigentlich nicht als Hausherr, sondern eher als Gast“, meint er bescheiden. Deshalb will er das Geschaffene auch nicht für sich behalten: „Der Saal im zweiten Stock wird künftig für die verschiedensten kulturellen Veranstaltungen offen stehen“, verrät Hofmann seine Pläne. Finanziert werden soll das mögliche Harburger Kulturzentrum durch Zimmervermietung im übrigen Teil des wunderschön an der Wörnitz gelegenen einstigen Gotteshauses.

befand. „Es soll ein dezenter Hinweis auf den Ursprung des Gebäudes sein“, so Hofmann. Symmetrisch umlagern gotische Spitzbogenfenster die zentrale Stelle. Warum die Bauherren von 1754 gerade auf diese Stilrichtung zurückgriffen, ist Wolf Hofmann noch nicht klar – solche scheinbar „unergündlichen“ Details üben auch nach Abschluß der umfangreichen Arbeiten Faszination auf den Stuttgarter aus.

„In Harburg soll Kultur und Handwerk wieder zusammengebracht werden“, ist eine weitere Idee, denn „ich habe beim Umbau der Synagoge gemerkt, welch wunderschöne Kunst das Handwerk eigentlich ist.“

Schon der Altstadtsanierungsplan für Harburg schlägt die Synagoge als Kulturzentrum vor. Wolf Hofmann hat ohne großes Aufsehen kurzzeitig die Voraussetzung geschaffen. „Für die vielen verborgenen Talente: Bei uns in der alten Synagoge findet ihr immer ein offenes Ohr für Ausstellungen, Konzerte oder Dich-terlesungen“, bietet Wolf Hofmann offen an.

„Behutsam“ – darauf legt er besonderen Wert – will er ein kulturelles Monatsprogramm aufziehen. Hinter allem steht eine übergeordnete Idee: „Eigentlich habe ich vor, einen qualifizierten Fremdenverkehr nach Harburg zu leiten; nach dem Motto: Individualismus statt Massenabfertigung.“

Kontakt mit New York

Zu diesem Zweck hat Wolf Hofmann bereits Kontakte nach New York und San Francisco geknüpft. Auch Skandinavier oder Frankreich kann er sich als kunstinteressierte Harburg-Touristen vorstellen. Mit deren Hilfe könnte nach seiner Auffassung das kulturelle Leben auch finanziert werden. Im ehemaligen jüdischen Gotteshaus sind beispielsweise zwei Ferienwohnungen und fünf Zimmer eingerichtet.

Im ehemaligen Harburger Pfarrhaus, das Hofmann ebenfalls erworben hat, könnte er sich in der Zukunft eine Art Refugium für Stipendiaten von Kunstakademien vorstellen.

„Kultur bringt Freude“, faßt Wolf Hofmann seine Lebensphilosophie zusammen. Gestern hat er spontan ein „musikalisches Frühstück“ organisiert. 30 Leute sind begeistert gekommen, der Konzertfüßel wurde aufgestellt, man aß und trank und freute sich.

Wie ein Mann auf eigene Faust die Harburger Synagoge renovierte

Rolf Hofmanns Beitrag zur Belebung des gemeindlichen Kulturlebens

Von unserem Redaktionsmitglied Oliver Jarasch

HARBURG. Die Harburger Synagoge: 1754 erbaut, 1936 verlassen, schließlich zum Büro umfunktionierte, weitere 50 Jahre später gekauft von Rolf Hofmann. Der gebürtige Stuttgarter hat sich des Gebäudes angenommen — weil er „irgendwie auch die Verpflichtung spürte, etwas damit anzufangen“. Das Ergebnis, eine Art Kulturzentrum für die 5700-Einwohner-Gemeinde, wurde nun erstmals den Harburger Bürgern vorgestellt.

Rolf Hofmann möchte die Einladung so oft wie möglich wiederholen. Er will das geschmackvoll schlicht renovierte Haus Künstlern anbieten, „die bisher im verborgenen arbeiteten“: Musikern, Malern, Dichtern.

Aus der Synagoge könnte — wie es der Altsanierungsplan von Harburg (Landkreis Donau-Ries) bereits vorschlägt — ein neues Kulturzentrum werden, das „sich zwanglos zu einer selbstverständlichen Institution entwickelt, wobei meine Person dann möglichst in den Hintergrund rückt“, wie der Schwabe bescheiden anmerkt.

Rolf Hofmann, ein gelernter Architekt, hat bereits konkrete Pläne: Im Juli und August will er eine „musikalische Mittagspause“ anbieten. Die Anregung hat er aus den Vereinigten Staaten bekommen, dahinter steckt die Idee, während der Arbeitspause bei ein paar Takten legerer Musik zu entspannen. Zu einem musikalischen Frühstück am Sonntagvormittag bei Klaviermusik konnte Rolf Hofmann schon 30 Harburger/innen anlocken.

Ein siebenarmiger Leuchter

Für jeden, der etwas auf die Beine stellen, sich engagieren will, gilt: „Bei uns in der alten Synagoge findet jeder ein offenes Ohr“, bietet der 46jährige ohne jegliche Einschränkung an. Von Halbherzigkeiten hält Hofmann nichts. Das haben schon die umfangreichen Sanierungsarbeiten gezeigt, die er eher im verborgenen, ohne großes Aufsehen durchführte.

Die von einem Ingenieurbüro vor vielen Jahren eingezogene Decke drei Meter über dem ehemaligen Synagogenboden hat Rolf Hofmann übernommen. Sonst ist aber von den nüchternen Geschäftsräumen nichts mehr zu spüren: Angenehme, rotbraune Fliesen, helle Holzbalken an der Decke, dezente Messinglampen lassen die Spitzbogenfenster wieder selbst wirken.

Ein aus Lindenholz gearbeiteter siebenarmiger Leuchter — die „Menora“ — weist ohne jegliche Aufdringlichkeit auf die einstige Bestimmung des Gebäudes hin. Er ist dort angebracht, wo sich früher, als es die jüdische Gemeinde Harburg noch gab, der Thorschein befand.

„Qualifizierter Fremdenverkehr“

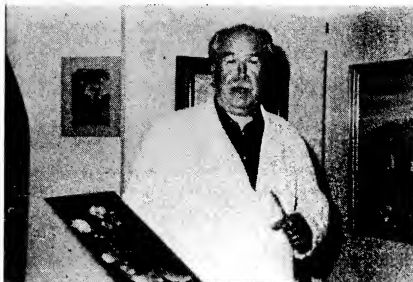

Im übrigen Teil der ehemaligen Synagoge sind zwei Ferienwohnungen und fünf Feiernärraum entstanden. Darin sieht Rolf Hofmann eine Finanzierungsmöglichkeit seiner Ideen. Einer seiner Leitgedanken ist es, „einen qualifizierten Fremdenverkehr“ nach Harburg zu holen; Individualtourismus statt Massenabfertigung. Kontakte nach New York und San Francisco hat Hofmann schon geknüpft. Das zweite ehemalige Harburger Pfarrhaus, das ebenfalls erworben hat, bietet er Stipendiaten von Kunstakademien an.

Über seine Gedanken und Pläne redet Rolf Hofmann im Grunde nicht gern. Er handelt lieber. „Ich habe viel vor. Es soll aber alles behutsam vor sich gehen“, sagt er. Er will „kein Spinner“ sein.

VERNISSAGE IN HARBURG

Malen als Zeitvertreib in der Alten Synagoge

Harburg(g). Bisheriger Höhepunkt der kulturellen Veranstaltungen in der Harburger Alten Synagoge war die Eröffnung der Ausstellung "Malen als Zeitvertreib" am 6. Oktober. Vor vielen Gästen, darunter auch der Bürgermeister der Stadt Harburg, Herr Anton Fischer und der Leiter der Sparkasse, Herr Klaus Lange, präsentierte Dr. Ruthard Hammer seine bisherigen Werke.

Dr. Ruthard Hammer, allseits geschätzt und bekannt als langjähriger Hausarzt alten Stils, griff in seinem Leben oft zu Farbe und Pinsel und beschäftigte sich vor Allem mit Motiven der romantischen Harburger Altstadt und der Burg, die über dem Städtchen thront. Wie der 71-jährige Künstler betonte, waren die Ergebnisse seiner Passion bisher als Freizeitbeschäftigung entstanden. Nunmehr, im Ruhestand, hat er alle Zeit der Welt um seiner Lieblingsbeschäftigung, dem Malen nachzugehen. Zur Freude der Harburger Bürger und Besucher sieht man ihn nun oft mit seiner Staffelei an markanten Punkten der Stadt. Sein jüngstes Werk, der "Holzwurm", ein altes Gebäude in der Innenstadt zeigt, wie er herzerfrischend und unkompliziert mit kräftigem Pinselstrich diese schöne Ansicht auf die Leinwand zaubert.

Talent vom Vater

Harburg zog schon immer Maler an. Bereits sein Vater malte diese schöne Stadt. Ob ihm hier viel Talent in die Wiege gelegt wurde? Stolz zeigt er die beiden einzigen Fremd-Exponate der Ausstellung. Bilder der Harburg, die sein Vater hier gemalt hat. Inhaltlicher Schwerpunkt der Ausstellung sind Bilder der Stadt Harburg. Der Betrachter wird angeregt, die chronologische Reihenfolge selbst herzustellen. Bemerkenswert sind Bilder aus der Schulzeit von Dr. Hammer. Bereits als 11-jähriger zeigte er erstaunliche Kreativität.

Schon beim Betreten der Ausstellung fällt ein Skizzenblock in das Auge des Betrachters. Dieser begleitete ihn auf dem Russlandfeldzug. Man sollte aber dabei nicht die Portraits übersehen, die im Flur zum Saal hängen. Diese Bilder entstanden während der Studienzeit.

Den Anstoß zu dieser Ausstellung gab Herr Hoffmann, der Eigentümer der Alten Synagoge. Er sah die Gemälde bei einem Besuch in der Wohnung von Dr. Hammer. Nun sind sie in einer gelungenen Ausstellung auch der Öffentlichkeit zugänglich. Die Ausstellung kann noch bis Samstag, 14. Oktober, besichtigt werden. Hier die Öffnungszeiten. Freitag, 13. Oktober, 18 - 20 Uhr und Samstag, 14. Oktober, 14 - 18 Uhr.

Kultur ist teuer

Herr Hoffmann, früher Architekt, hat mit seiner Bereitschaft einen großen Teil des Gebäudes für die Kultur zur Verfügung zu stellen, der Stadt

Altstadt mit Blick auf die Burg, entstanden 1976

Harburg ein gutes Werk getan. Wenn die Mittel zur Verfügung stehen, kann sich hier ein kultureller Mittelpunkt entwickeln. Zwar wurde die Ausstellung durch die Sparkasse Harburg unterstützt, doch sollten auch Bürger hierbei mitwirken. Und sei es nur durch den Kauf eines Buches, die im Saal ausliegen. Nicht nur der Sport bedarf der Unterstützung. Auch Kultur ist teuer.

Reizvolle Veranstaltungen

Äußerst reizvoll sind auch die weiteren Projekte. Am Mittwoch, 25. Oktober, 19.30 Uhr stellt Johanna Rottenecker-Lingg unter dem Motto "Ma ka alles ibtreiba" Schwäbische Mundartgedichte vor. Ungünstig und direkt sinniert Frau Rottenecker über die Feinheiten und Widrigkeiten des täglichen Lebens. Das gespro-

"My beer is Rheingold—the Dry beer!" 1965 ELLA FITZGERALD

"It's easy as snapping my fingers!" says Ella Fitzgerald, one of the all-time singing greats of popular music. "I'm talking, of course, about settling on a favorite beer. Mine is the favorite of most people—New York's largest-selling beer—Rheingold Extra Dry!" Millions choose Rheingold for that clean, clear, real-beer taste. It's in a class all its own—never sweet, never bitter, always wonderfully, refreshingly dry!

SALAMANDER - LEVI FAMILY OF STUTTGART

Extract of ancestral display by Rolf Hofmann (HarburgProject@aol.com) with help of descendants of the Levi family

VERSION 04

The Salamander Story began in 1891, when the Jewish leather merchant Max Levi of Stuttgart founded a shoe manufacturing company in Kornwestheim (near Stuttgart in Southern Germany) together with the Christian master shoe maker Jakob Sigle. In 1903 they started a joint venture with the shoe merchant Rudolf Moos in Berlin, who was in search of producers of excellent and inexpensive shoes in large quantities. This was the start of the Salamander Shoe Manufacturing Company. Within twenty years it became the leading shoe company in Germany, exclusively selling shoes in its own shops all over Germany. All of Max Levi's brothers (except Morris) and his Rothschild brothers-in-law participated in this shoe and leather business. When Max Levi died in 1925 he had just finished building his new family home, which in fact looked more like a castle. He also had financial problems, as he had acquired other shoe Sigle family. Siegfried Levi had an amazing hobby: he had bought Steinfels Castle near Heilbronn and was breeding horses for the Hoppegarten Race Track in Berlin. When Adolf Hitler came to power only Siegfried Levi and his brother Arthur were still alive. Under pressure of Nazi authorities they had to sell their Salamander business in Berlin, his brother Siegfried Levi went on with the main business together with Arthur Levi and members of the Rothschild and Switzerland. The Salamander Company was again successful after World War II, but during the following decades increasing wages led to a decline in profits. Labor in Eastern Europe and Asia had become much cheaper and the Swiss were forced to close factories in Germany. Around the year 2000 there was not much left of the once glorious shoe enterprise. The Villa of Max Levi in Stuttgart survived under the city's ownership and still reminds of the ups and downs of a shoe empire that once was unique in Germany. The Salamander brand is still well known in Germany, but only very few people really know of the Jewish aspect of this amazing story.

THE SALAMANDER-LEVI FAMILY

by Rolf Hofmann (HarburgProject@aol.com), based on own research

THE SALAMANDER STORY IN GENERAL

The Salamander Story actually started in 1891 as "Jacob Sigle & Co", when the Jewish leather merchant Max Levi of Stuttgart founded a shoe manufacturing company in Kornwestheim (north of Stuttgart in Southern Germany) together with the Christian master shoemaker Jakob Sigle. In 1903 the two partners started a joint venture with the shoe trader Rudolf Moos in Berlin, who was in search of producers of excellent and inexpensive shoes in large quantities to serve the constantly growing need for shoes in Berlin. This was the start of the Salamander Shoe Manufacturing Company. Within twenty years it became the leading shoe company in Germany, exclusively selling shoes in its own shops all over Germany. All of Max Levi's brothers (except Morris, who had emigrated to San Francisco USA) and his Rothschild brothers-in-law participated in this shoe and leather business. When Max Levi died in 1925 from stomach cancer he had just finished building his new splendid family home (designed by well known architect Hugo Schloesser and his assistant Hans Weirther), which in fact looked more like a castle and was situated in one of Stuttgart's best living quarters. He may have also had some financial problems, as he had acquired other shoe factories and things had somehow run out of control. His brother Sem Levi took care of the Salamander business in Berlin, his brother Siegfried Levi went on with the main business together with his brother Arthur Levi and members of the Rothschild and Sigle family. Siegfried Levi had an amazing hobby: he had bought Stettenfels Castle near Heilbronn (north of Stuttgart) and was breeding horses for the Hoppegarten Race Track in Berlin. When Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933 only Siegfried Levi and his brother Arthur Levi were still alive. Under pressure of Nazi authorities they had to sell their Salamander shares and other personal properties and finally managed to escape to the USA (Arthur Levi) and South Africa (Siegfried Levi). In 1939 Max Levi's widow Ida (then married to Adolf Michel, a Swiss citizen) emigrated to Switzerland. The Salamander Company was again successful after World War II, but during the following decades increasing wages led to a decline in profits. Labor in Eastern Europe and Asia had become much cheaper and Salamander was forced to close factories in Germany. Around the year 2000 there was not much left of the once glorious shoe enterprise. The Villa of Max Levi in Stuttgart survived under the city's ownership as a school for librarians and even today still reminds with its splendour of the ups and downs of a shoe empire that once was unique in Germany. The Salamander brand is still well known in Germany, but only very few people really know of the Jewish aspect of this amazing story.

THE LEVI ANCESTORS

The first known member of the Salamander-Levi family was Lazarus Levi (1800-1860) in Gondelsheim near Karlsruhe in the Grand Duchy of Baden. He married ca 1825/26 Clara nee Cramer (1807-1899) from Walldorf. Their son Raphael Levi (1836-1903) married 1861 in Gondelsheim Mathilde nee Ottenheimer (1839-1890) from Nordstetten (south of Stuttgart). The couple moved to Heslach (then a suburb of Stuttgart) around 1863, and Raphael Levi worked there as a cattle trader. Between 1864 and 1880 Raphael Levi's wife gave birth to 5 sons and 3 daughters. Their names were Moritz, Max, Sem, Arthur, Siegfried, Ida, Hedwig and Bertha. The daughters married into Rothschild families in Nordstetten, their husbands becoming partners of the shoe manufacturing business, started by Max Levi. For details see their own family sheets.

THE SAENGER BROTHERS IN NEW ORLEANS

Concept of a biographical sketch by Rolf Hofmann, based on own research

The Saenger Brothers once played an important role in the early days of American Film History, but they are nearly forgotten today. Their grandfather was Rabbi Jonas Saenger (1803 – 1880) in Bittenwiesen (Bavaria). Their father Israel Saenger (1841 – 1918) had emigrated to North America and settled for a while in Norfolk in Virginia, where his sons Julian Henri and Abraham were born. Around 1890 the family moved to Shreveport in Louisiana, where Israel Saenger served as Rabbi for the Hebrew Zion Community for the next ten years. His two sons studied pharmacy and opened their own business in Shreveport, the "Saenger Drug Company", with a 24 hours service, a remarkable and unique aspect in these days.

In 1911 the brothers Julian Henri and Abraham founded the "Saenger Amusement Company". They started building and managing Vaudeville Theatres with additional movie performances. Movies then were only a few minutes long and without sound. But soon the great era of stillfilm movies started, and movies developed a better quality and became longer in duration. The construction of movie theatres became profitable, and evenings in the movie theatres were regarded as highly attractive social events. In 1919 the "Saenger Amusement Company" had settled in New Orleans, the amazing and bustling metropolis on the Mississippi. The Saenger Brothers offered first class entertainment in a theatre with outstanding splendid interior. The auditorium with its spectacular historic palace fronts along the walls and the blue star spangled sky on top of all reminded of ancient roman architecture. Visitors were accompanied to their seats by ushers in uniforms and performances were preceded by live orchestra music. Today the Saenger Theatre at Canal Street in New Orleans still exists in its original splendor and recalls the glamour of the Golden Twenties. Still a very fine place for high level entertainment and one of America's most beautiful theatres of the past.

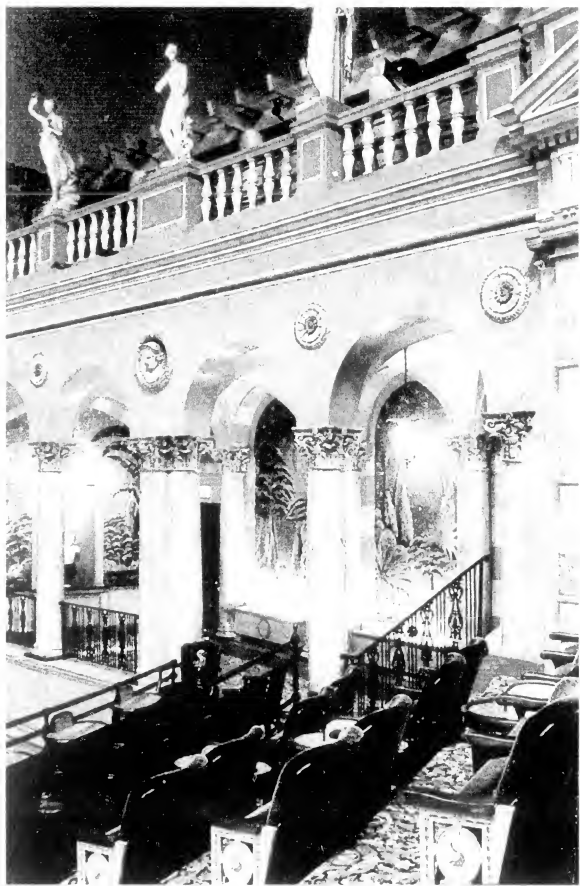

Towards the end of the Twenties the Saenger Brothers owned about 300 movie theatres in the Southern States and the Caribbean, but for some reasons it became obvious that the days of this fabulous Movie Empire would come to an end. These were the days of Prohibition and Mafia in the United States of America. In 1929 Paramount Pictures Corporation bought the Saenger Brother's Movie Empire, right before the Stock Exchange had its black friday and the country fell into a deep depression. Adolph Zukor, hungarian jew and big boss of Paramount then, strangely enough not even mentioned this transaction in his biography. the Saenger Empire disappeared mysteriously noiseless. And so was Julian Henry Saenger's unexpected and sudden death in 1932 at the age of 59. Strange rumours of family members point out that his death might have occurred not the way it was described officially in the newspapers. Julian Henry, one of the movie princes in his days, was not interred in New Orleans but in Shreveport, near his parents graves.

MAXIMILIAN JOSEPH MICHELBACHER IN RICHMOND

Rabbiner in den Wirren des amerikanischen Bürgerkriegs

Die Residenzstadt Oettingen im Nördlinger Ries hatte zu Beginn des 19. Jahrhunderts viel von ihrem Glanz als Zentrum der Grafschaft Oettingen eingebüsst, nachdem das Territorium der Fürsten von Oettingen-Spielberg und Oettingen-Wallerstein zum grössten Teil dem Königreich Bayern zugeschlagen wurde. In diese Zeit wurde nun der Sohn eines jüdischen Federhändlers geboren, der später einer der bedeutenden Rabbiner Nordamerikas werden sollte. Geboren wurde Maximilian Joseph im Jahre 1810 in Oettingen als Sohn des Federhändlers Jakob Nathan, der 1813 in Folge des Judenedikts den Familiennamen "Michelbacher" annahm. Allerdings lautete der Geburtsname des Sohns auf "Marx", der deutschen Umschreibung des traditionellen jüdischen Namens "Mordechai". Die Treue zum bayerischen Königshaus dürfte wohl dazu geführt haben, dass aus "Marx" dann sehr viel später in Amerika "Maximilian Joseph" wurde. Um 1830 erhielt Marx Michelbacher die Stelle als Hilfslehrer an der Seite des Lehrers Salomon Eichberg in Kreuznach, allerdings nur für eine sehr kurze Zeit, da er sich dann als Lehrling und danach durchaus erfolgreich als Handlungscommis beim Weinhändler David Haymann verdingte. Finanzielle Überlegungen mögen hierbei eine Rolle gespielt haben. Lehrer waren traditionell immer schon Hungerleider gewesen, weil sie schlecht bezahlt wurden.

Zwischen 1837 und 1840 wanderte Michelbacher nach Nordamerika aus, nannte sich "Reverend Max Michelbacher" und arbeitete als religiöser Lehrer und als Sekretär für einen jüdischen Wohltätigkeitsverein in Philadelphia (Pennsylvania). Um 1846 begab er sich nach Richmond im Bundesstaat Virginia und nannte sich dort "Reverend Maximilian Joseph Michelbacher". Er betreute nun als Rabbiner die Reformgemeinde Beth Ahaba, eine kleine jüdische Gemeinde, die sich erst um 1840 aus deutschen Einwanderern konstituiert hatte. Eine Ordination als Rabbiner hatte Michelbacher zwar nie erhalten und war demnach also kein "wirklicher" Rabbiner, was ihm von anderen bedeutenden amerikanischen Rabbinern wie dem aus Böhmen stammenden und in Cincinnati wirkenden Rabbiner Isaac Mayer Wise durchaus vorgehalten wurde. Aber daran störte sich in Richmond niemand, auch nicht daran, dass er ein ganz miserables Englisch sprach. Man war froh an ihm, da er dem vertrauten deutschen Religionsritus zugetan war, obendrein ein guter Redner war und auch in deutscher Sprache predigte. Er war damit neben Rabbiner Merzbacher in New York ein weiterer bedeutender Vertreter des deutschen Reform-Judentums in Amerika. Ausser seiner Tätigkeit als Rabbiner war er auch als Lehrer tätig und als Verfasser von Gebetstexten.

Während des amerikanischen Bürgerkriegs (1861-1864) trat Reverend Michelbacher für die religiösen Bedürfnisse der jüdischen Soldaten in der Armee der Südstaaten ein, indem er mit General Robert E Lee korrespondierte, um den jüdischen Soldaten eine Befreiung vom Kampfgeschehen an den Hohen Feiertagen Rosh Hashana, Yom Kippur und Pessach zu ermöglichen. Lee musste dieses Anliegen ganz zwangsläufig ablehnen, da das Kriegsgeschehen naturgemäss auf Feiertage keine Rücksicht nahm. Sein Antwortschreiben war jedoch getragen von religiösem Respekt. Michelbacher machte im übrigen keinerlei Hehl von seiner vehementen Unterstützung der politischen und militärischen Positionen der Südstaaten und vor allem auch der Sklaverei, die er als "gottgegeben" betrachtete, verbunden mit der Auffassung, dass man die schwarzen Sklaven barmherzig und gerecht behandeln müsse. Auch machte er sich für die jüdischen Kaufleute stark, die man in Folge der kriegsbedingten Verknappung der Lebensmittel fälschlicher Weise als Sündenböcke verantwortlich machen wollte.

Zwanzig Jahre lang war Maximilian Joseph Michelbacher Rabbiner der jüdischen Reformgemeinde in Richmond gewesen, als man 1867 seinen Vertrag nicht mehr verlängern wollte und Reverend Judah Wechsler zum Nachfolger bestimmte. Die Zeit war über Michelbacher hinweg gegangen, die deutsche Sprache spielte keine Rolle mehr im religiösen Geschehen und auch die inzwischen nachfolgende Generation der deutschen Einwanderer sprach nur noch englisch. Allerdings blieb Michelbacher seiner Gemeinde noch als Lehrer erhalten, man schätzte letzten Endes die Art und Weise wie er Bedeutungsvolles in Worte fassen konnte. Ein weiterer Grund für die Beendigung seiner Tätigkeit als Rabbiner mag auch ein Schlaganfall im Jahr zuvor auf der Kanzel während des Gottesdienstes gewesen sein, der ihn teilweise lähmte und ihm für den Rest seines Lebens Beschwerden bereitete. Als Maximilian Joseph Michelbacher im Jahre 1879 verstarb, gedachte man seiner in einem würdigen Nachruf in der örtlichen Zeitung. Gross war auch die Zahl der Trauergäste, nachdem er Mitglied in vielen Vereinigungen gewesen war und man ihn überall als bedeutende Persönlichkeit sehr geschätzt hatte.

He was born as "Marx" but changed his name to "Maximilian Joseph" according to the name of the Bavarian king at the date of his birth in 1810.

Around 1830 Maximilian Joseph Michelbacher became an assistant teacher at the Jewish school in Kreuznach, but then worked as an apprentice for the wine merchant David Haymann in Kreuznach and left this town around 1837. He then emigrated to Philadelphia, Pennsylvania (USA) around 1842 and worked there as a teacher, finally in 1846 he became a minister (though never ordained as a Rabbi) of Congregation Beth Ahabah in Richmond, Virginia and stayed in this position until 1866.

Version 03

Extract of ancestral chart compiled by Rolf Hofmann by using results of fellow researchers. The surname "Naumburg" may derive from the village "Naumburg an der Saale" or even from the tiny village "Naumburg am Bober" (?) close to Glogau in Silesia, which before 1742 was austrian, then prussian, since 1871 part of the German Empire and now belongs to Poland. "Glogau" became "Glogow" and "Naumburg am Bober" became "Nowgorod Bobranski" in polish language.

DIE OETTINGER BROTHERS IN KINSTON

Aus Pflaumloch nach North Carolina ausgewandert

Es zeigt sich immer wieder, dass der bemerkenswerte geschäftliche Erfolg jüdischer Familien oft genug auch auf einer lebenslangen engen familiären Verbindung von Brüdern beruht. Ein schönes Beispiel hierfür sind die Brüder David, Salomon und Abraham Oettinger aus Pflaumloch, geboren in den 40er Jahren des 19. Jahrhunderts. Die Familie stammte ursprünglich aus Ederheim, der Vater Löw Oettinger hatte jedoch als Viehhändler nach Pflaumloch in die Pflaum'sche Familie geheiratet. Er wurde später um 1869 dann Mitbegründer der Jüdischen Gemeinde in Nördlingen und beschloss dort auch seinen Lebensabend.

Sein Sohn David, der älteste der drei Oettinger Brüder, wagte 1857 die Überfahrt nach Amerika, vermutlich zusammen mit seinem zwanzig Jahre älteren Vetter Henry Oettinger, der sich in Goldsboro im Bundesstaat North Carolina als Kaufmann niederliess. David nannte sich nun "Dave", betrieb einen Handel im Bundesstaat Virginia und meldete sich als Ausdruck seiner patriotischen Gesinnung mit Beginn des Amerikanischen Bürgerkriegs (1861-1864) als Freiwilliger bei der Armee der Südstaaten. Nach dem Bürgerkrieg begann Dave Oettinger gemeinsame Geschäfte mit seinen inzwischen von Pflaumloch nach Amerika emigrierten Brüdern, die sich nun "Sol" und "Abe" nannten. Es war auch in Amerika besser für den geschäftlichen Erfolg, wenn man sich nicht gar so sehr traditionell jüdisch gab.

1873 gründeten die drei Brüder die Firma "Oettinger Brothers" in Kinston im Bundesstaat North Carolina. Neben der Farm- und Holzwirtschaft waren dort Tabak und Baumwolle die wesentlichen Wirtschaftszweige. Anfänglich konzentrierten sich die Geschäfte der Oettinger Brüder hauptsächlich auf den Groß- und Einzelhandel von Textilwaren aller Art, bald schon erweiterten sich die Aktivitäten auf eine ganze Reihe anderer Unternehmungen. "Oettinger Brothers" waren gegen Ende des 19. Jahrhunderts dann unter anderem beteiligt an den Aktivitäten der Kinston Cotton Mill, der Orion Knitting Mill, der Lenoir Oil & Ice Company und der Chesterfield Manufacturing Company (letzte in Petersburg im Bundesstaat Virginia).

Dave, Sol und Abe Oettinger waren ehrliche Geschäftsleute mit allerbestem Ruf, und sie trugen viel zum wirtschaftlichen Gedeihen der kleinen Provinzstadt Kinston bei, besonders in den schlimmen Jahren nach dem Bürgerkrieg, als die gesamte Wirtschaft am Boden lag. Sie beschränkten sich hierbei nicht auf ihren privaten unternehmerischen Erfolg, sondern waren auch als öffentliche Wohltäter in ihrer Gemeinde verankert, und sie pflegten einen grossbürgerlichen Lebensstil. Ein Familienfoto von Abe Oettinger aus der Zeit um 1895 mit seiner Gattin Bertha (geborene Rosenthal) und den sieben Kindern läßt erahnen in welch anspruchsvollen Verhältnissen man damals lebte. Die Kleidung reflektiert feinste modische Art.

GRAVE OF EZEKIEL & MARY WAITZFELDER IN NEW YORK

THE WAITZFELDER FAMILY IN GEORGIA

Concept of a biographical sketch by Rolf Hofmann (HarburgProject@aol.com), based on own research and Henry Neuburger's book "The Waitzfelders of Milledgeville, Georgia."

The first known ancestor of the Waitzfelder family was Hoehnle Salomon (meaning Hoehnle = son of Salomon), who was born in Aufhausen (a few miles west of the historic "Imperial Town" Noerdlingen in Southern Germany) during the first half of the 18th century. The area around Noerdlingen (except this town itself, which was independent) for hundreds of years had been the "County of Oettingen", ruled by Counts and Princes, members of the noble Oettingen family, named after their original capital, the village of Oettingen. There were about a dozen Jewish communities in the historic County of Oettingen, and in Aufhausen there was one of them. In 1806 the Kingdoms of Wuertemberg (with Stuttgart as capital) and Bavaria (with Munich as capital) were founded, meaning the end of the historic County of Oettingen. The western part (1/3, including Aufhausen) became part of Wuertemberg, the eastern part (2/3) became part of Bavaria. Now back to Hoehnle Salomon, whose first name in German language is written with two dots on the "o" ("oe" standing instead of "o" with two dots on top), spelled like "u" in "fur".

Hoehnle Salomon settled in Moenchsdeggen around 1766. This little village (some ten miles south east of Noerdlingen), later often just called "Deggen in Bavaria", was also part of the County of Oettingen and had a Jewish community between 1684 and 1870. Around 1830 Hoehnle Salomon's grandsons Ezekiel (born 12 Oct 1811, as Jecheskel) and Michael (born 3 Mar 1815) as being cousins left Moenchsdeggen, emigrated to North America and settled in Milledgeville, the old State Capitol of Georgia. The surname "Waitzfelder" only had come into existence after 1813, when the King of Bavaria ordered every Jewish family to choose a surname, which most of them didn't have before.

The two cousins in Milledgeville started with a Dry Goods & Clothing Store, and each married the sister of the other brother. So Ezekiel married Mary (born 14 Feb 1822 as Mariam), and Michael married Rebecca (born ca 1820) at the very same day = 14 January 1844. They founded the "Milledgeville Manufacturing Company", produced fabric for clothing and later started a wool carding business. During the Civil War (1861-1865) they had a government contract for making uniforms for confederate soldiers. The factory wove cloth, which was cut into pattern at the penitentiary and sewed by women at home. Partners in business were Ezekiel's and Michael's nephews Leopold (born 8 Jul 1830 as Loeb) and Elkan (born 5 Sep 1833) Waitzfelder. They were brothers, and both were born in Moenchsdeggen too. And both married daughters of their uncles. Leopold married Michael's daughter Helena (born 10 Nov 1844 in Milledgeville), and Elkan married Ezekiel's daughter Fannie (born 27 Sep 1847 in Milledgeville). This family network proved to be extremely powerful and persisting. The Waitzfelders in Georgia were well respected people of good standing. They had a cotton plantation, a few "negro" slaves, a cotton factory and maintained a friendly relationship with Governor Joseph Brown. They served in the Confederate Army during Civil War and participated in breaking the sea blockade, that was imposed by the Union to stop cotton exports to England. Even after the War Ezekiel Waitzfelder kept his business in Milledgeville, when the rest of the family moved to New York and Philadelphia and settled as cotton factors and commission merchants. Ezekiel Waitzfelder died in Milledgeville in 1879, but was interred in New York The burialground of the Waitzfelder family is at Beth Olem Cemetery in an area called "Cypress Hills" in Brooklyn (New York).

ASCHER'S HOUSE ON FIRE

A strange series of house burnings in Nördlingen 1911
narrated by Rolf Hofmann

The summer of 1911 was unusually hot and dry. There was a threatening smell of disaster in the air. Hoof-and-mouth disease had spread nearly everywhere in the area around Nördlingen in Southern German and destroyed the farmers' cattle stock. Besides that a series of mysterious house burnings had been frightening the people of Nördlingen since spring of that year, the most spectacular incident being the burning of the Ascher family's house.

The ancestors of the Ascher family had moved from Lauchheim (between Nördlingen and Aalen) to Moenchsroth (close to Dinkelsbühl) in about 1720. As high ranking members of the Jewish Community there, they succeeded in acquiring considerable wealth as merchants of silver and bohemian wool in the nearby Imperial Town of Dinkelsbühl. A few generations later, Amson Ascher moved his family and business to Nördlingen. Together with his sons he managed a trading company dealing with hops and pitch. The seat of this family business was house number D 28 at Eisengasse, very close to the Town Hall. Today there is an open space, the building doesn't exist any more. At the time of the spectacular fire in 1911, Amson Ascher's son Leopold was the manager of the company. Leopold Ascher was born in 1851 in Moenchsroth. He had married Anna nee Spiegel. The couple had nine children, all born in Nördlingen. Leopold Ascher was a well respected man, who also served as President of the Jewish Community in Nördlingen.

When the firealarm bells awakened the people of Nördlingen in the early morning hours of August 1 in 1911, the house of the Ascher family was engulfed in flames. The fire had started on the ground floor in a storage area for oil, paint and pitch. So the people in the upper floors were unable to flee down the stairs. The fire brigade had to use ladders to rescue the inhabitants of the building. Luckily the flames didn't reach the nearby Town Hall, but Leopold Ascher's house was burnt down to the ground. So the property of this merchant family was destroyed within of few hours.

Besides the material damage the most tragic incident of this fire was the killing of Ascher's twenty- year-old maid, Peppi Rusch, from nearby Gremheim. A few days later her bones were found in the still warm ashes and ruins of the building. She had been trapped in her room when the fire occurred and could not escape. Rumours back then spoke of arson, as on August 21 another fire broke out on the property of the Hahn family at Baldinger Strasse. But official proof of this speculation was never found. Relief of this threatening situation came on September 15, when heavy rainfalls ended this long period of drought.

The only party who "benefited" from the fire at Ascher's house was the Ostertag Company in Aalen, who had provided the heavy metal safe for the Ascher Company. This safe, as the Nördlingen newspaper pointed out, had survived the fire with no major damage, leaving all the papers and money inside unharmed. Ascher's house was never rebuilt. Today the only memory of this building consists of an oil painting done in 1861 by Carl Boegler. This beautiful painting is part of the holdings of the Nördlingen City Archives and shows the Ascher House next to the Town Hall. Leopold Ascher died in 1916 at the age of 66, his wife followed him in 1933. Both found their eternal rest at the jewish cemetery of Nördlingen.

TOWN HALL OF NOERDLINGEN AT CENTER

LEOPOLD ASCHER'S HOUSE ON THE RIGHT

THE JEWISH MUSICIANS OF DENNENLOHE

by Rolf Hofmann (HarburgProject@aol.com), based on own research

Dennenlohe is practically unknown to most people even in Germany. This tiny village in Bavaria, some miles east of Dinkelsbuehl, is famous for its beautiful castle, created around 1730/50 by the italian architect Leopoldo Retti, who afterwards designed the New Castle in Stuttgart. Less known is the fact that in these days a small jewish community existed at Dennenlohe. Most of them were dedicated to playing music, and so the jewish musicians of Dennenlohe became well known even in far away places, because they played well, and they were cheaper than their christian competitors, who eyed them with suspicion.

Some descendants of these jewish musicians became quite famous, like Abraham Weiler. His father Emanuel Weiler was born in Dennenlohe and became Cantor of the jewish community in Fischach (Bavaria), where in 1852 his son Abraham was born. In 1870 the jewish community of Noerdlingen was founded, and Abraham Weiler became their first cantor and religious teacher, in which position he stayed until he died in 1908. He was well respected, not only as a cantor but also as a perfect sharp shooter, and so for some time he had also served as a master of the local rifle organisation. His grave monument at the jewish cemetery in Noerdlingen shows a broken lyra, thus reminding of his ancestors tradition as musicians.

Another even more famous descendant of the jewish musicians of Dennenlohe was Samuel Naumburg. His father Baruch Elkan Naumburg was an oboe player and his uncle Simson Wolf Naumburg was the cantor of the jewish community at Hainsfarth in Bavaria. Samuel Naumburg was born at Dennenlohe in 1817 and received his musical education in Munich. In 1845 he was appointed first chazzan (cantor) at the Synagogue Notre-Dame-de-Nazareth in Paris. He was sponsored by the composer Jacques Fromental Halevy to carry out plans for a thorough reform of liturgic music. So Samuel Naumburg became an important composer of synagogue melodies and thus still today is compared with the famous composers Solomon Sulzer and Louis Lewandowsky. He was also a close friend of the composer Giacomo Meyerbeer, who was born in Berlin and also lived in Paris. When Samuel Naumburg died in 1880 he was interred at Montparnasse Cemetery in Paris. Today nobody cares for his grave. It still exists, but nobody really knows where it actually is. But his compositions are still part of the synagogue services and thus remind of him.

Two of Samuel Naumburg's cousins were prominent in the USA. Louis Naumburg served as a cantor in Philadelphia and later as a religious teacher in Pittsburg. Elkan Naumburg became a banker and philanthropist in New York, where he donated the well known band shell at Central Park.

RAPHAEL MAI – A COUNTRY PHYSICIAN IN HARBURG

narrated by Rolf Hofmann (HarburgProject@aol.com), based on own research

The jewish physician Dr Raphael Mai was one of the legendary personalities in 19th century Harburg. Born in 1806 as son of the merchant Abraham Mai, he studied at the University in Wuerzburg, first philosophy, later medicine. In 1829 he obtained his doctorate. In 1831 he got his physician's certification in Munich from the King's government and was sent back to Harburg to deal with a widespread cholera disease problem. He finally settled as a country physician in Harburg and also took care of the workers, when the railway was built around 1845-1850. For all his life he was a well respected helper in need, making no difference between christians and jews.

When he had been 50 years in constant service for peoples health, the mayor of Harburg in 1881 proposed him for the Kings "Saint Michael Medal". He emphasized, that Dr Mai always had been dedicated to unselfish assistance and took no money from poor people. He was also a very special helper around 1840, when there was a smallpox epidemic in the area around Harburg. He succeeded in finding out the source of this disease. A weaver in the small village of Huemheim was infected with smallpox and spread this disease by infecting his customers, who came from all over the district. Despite all these praises the mayor of Harburg was not successful, the Kings government in Augsburg refused to grant the medal. Being 50 years in service did not seem to be a reason for a reward like this.

Dr Mai went on treating his patients until 1886. He had planned to spend old age with his wife Minna in Munich, where their children lived. His wife, by the way, was the granddaughter of the legendary Court Jew Jakob Lippmann Hechinger in Harburg, who used to deal with important negotiations for the Prince of Oettingen-Wallerstein, and whose noble mansion still decorates the upper end of market square in Harburg. Dr Mai could not enjoy much of his retired life in Munich, as his wife died one year later. He himself followed six years later in the fall of 1893. They were both interred at the old jewish cemetery in Munich. Their grave monument still exists.

LEOPOLD GULDMANN – A SAGA OF THE WILD WEST

researched by Rolf Hofmann (HarburgProject@aol.com) using parts of Dayle Friedman Rabinowitz's biography

Since 1745 the Guldman family had lived in Harburg, a small romantic village in the County of Oettingen (which after 1806 became part of Bavaria), beginning with Laemie Alexander, who was accepted to settle in Harburg by the Count of Oettingen-Wallerstein, after he and his family had been expelled from nearby Monheim (then being part of the Duchy of Pfalz-Neuburg), together with all the other Jewish families who had lived there since 1698. Laemie Alexander's great-grandson, the butcher Hajum Hirsch Guldman (1804-1886), had eight children. His older son Samuel (1840-1909) took over his fathers business.

Hajums younger son Leopold (1852-1936) in 1870 emigrated to the USA. He took the boat "Cimbria" to New York and moved to Watertown (Wisconsin), where he worked for seven years as clerk for his brother-in-law Morris A. Hirsch, who had immigrated from Fellheim near Memmingen in Bavaria and owned the New York Store in Watertown. There he became accustomed to the American way of business life. Around 1877 he moved further west towards the Rocky Mountains, where silver ore was detected in great quantities, a fact that attracted thousands of adventurers and businessmen alike. In Leadville and Cripple Creek Leopold Guldman opened shops and started supplying silverdiggers and other fortune seekers with their basic needs.

His trading posts were successful, because he used to buy and sell in cash. He bought huge quantities of merchandise from bankrupt companies and sold them at cheap price. His Rocky Mountain business was very successful, so in 1879 he founded the "Golden Eagle Dry Goods Company" in Denver (Colorado). With his solid business principles he even survived the silver panic of 1893, when other companies and banks had great losses by the decline of the silver value. By this time Leopold Guldman had taken his nephews Max and Rudolph (also born in Harburg) into the business. He bought land in Denver in an area that later was to become the center of the city and in 1905 built the "Golden Eagle Dry Goods Department Store" (at the corner of Lawrence Street and Sixteenth Street), an impressive and fine architecture.

As Leopold Guldman had become one of the wealthy and respected merchants of the Wild West, a real "Merchant Prince" in these days, in 1912 he built his Guldman Mansion in one of Denver's best living quarters (at the corner of Humboldt Street and Tenth Avenue), planned by the famous architect Aaron Grove. This building later was known as the Bonfils Mansion, as Frederick Bonfils (owner of the Denver Post) had acquired this building around 1914 under circumstances which actually never were really cleared up.

Leopold Guldman enjoyed the later years of his success. He used to spend the cold winter months at the Cote d'Azur in France. And he used to give away freely from his fortune to people and institutions of all kind. When he died in Denver in 1936 he had already become a well known patron and philanthropist, because of his various charitable foundations during his lifetime. The Golden Eagle Dry Goods business went on until 1939 when it finally was closed down. The department store building was later "razed" like so many other old buildings of Denver and replaced by a modern office building. Leopold Guldman's splendid home, the "Guldman Mansion" survived him for quite a while, until it was also demolished in the 1960s and replaced by an apartment building, known as Cheesman Gardens.

(03) NN

(04) NN

(A) The spelling "COHEN" first appears around 1813, when Jewish families were ordered to adopt last names. AB Cohen's father, his uncle and (before them) his grandfather were Rabbis for the Wallerstein District between 1752 and 1789. They were descendants of the famous Rappaport family with its rabbinical tradition. AB Cohen's father and uncle became Rabbis in Bonn after leaving Wallerstein. When AB Cohen had serious financial problems in Wallerstein, he fled to his father in Bonn, who in 1802 brought his son back to Wallerstein and payed his debts.

(B) Hirsch Kuhn was a cousin of AB Cohen, their grandfather was Rabbi Zwi Hirsch Rappaport (known in Wallerstein as "Hirsch Kuhn"), who served the Wallerstein District Rabbinate 1751 - 1763.

(C) Heinrich Cohen's grandson Heinrich Cohen (1869-1940) was the last Jewish owner of the AB Cohen business in Munich, before it became "arianized" in 1937 by Herbert Stiehler (senior salesmann of "Loden-Frey" in Munich)

(see own family sheet)

(A) Ezechiel Pfeiffer was born as "Pfeiffer ben Marx". Around 1824 (or probably even before) he adopted "Pfeiffer" as last name for his family and called himself "Ezechiel Pfeiffer", according to the king's order that Jewish families had to adopt last names.

(B) Ezechiel Pfeiffer's father was Marx Ansel (traditionally named Mordechai Cohen Zedek), who became a Court Jew for the Count of Hohenlohe in Weikersheim in 1761, built a new synagogue in Weikersheim in 1768 and died there in 1780.

(C) Samuel Neckarsulmer (ca 1735 Neckarsulm - 3 Mar 1788 Fuerth) lived in Fuerth since ca 1758. Head of Jewish community until ca 1785. He was a trader in various goods, later in life in partnership with son Moses. His first wife was Hanna Lichtenstaedter, his second wife (married before 1764) was Heffele Gidean, daughter of Koschmann Gidean. She passed away in Fuerth 9 Oct 1801.

(D) Weikersheim birth records give birth date of Marx as 16 Aug 1786, his familysheet in Stuttgart shows his birth date as 25 Jul 1787.

Die Trennung in "gräfliche Juden" und "commenthurische Juden" findet erst ab 1719/20 in der Geldrechnung des Amtes Schneidheim statt. Es kann sich demnach im davor liegenden Zeitraum 1710 bis 1719 um eine Mischung der Zugehörigkeit handeln. "Zimmerische Gefälle" sind aus dieser Zeit bisher noch nicht feststellbar.

VORGESCHICHTE

Es gab im Prinzip immer drei tributpflichtige Herrschaften in Kleinerdingen:

- (1) Gräfllich (ab 1735 Fürstlich) = Oettingen-Wallerstein bzw ab 1678 Oettingen-Spielberg
 - (2) Commenthurisch = Johanniter Ordens Kommende
 - (3) Zimmerisch = ursprünglich zum Kloster Zimmern gehörige Grundstücke bzw darauf liegende Steuern. Im Jahr 1721 hat Fürst Albrecht Ernst II aus der Linie Oettingen-Oettingen die zimmerischen Ordinarigefälle exclusive derer zu Kleinerdingen eingekauft, später wohl auch noch die Kleinerdingler zimmerischen Gefälle mitsamt den Judenschutzzgeldern. Nachdem Aussterben der Linie Oettingen-Oettingen mit dem Tod von Albrecht Ernst II im Jahre 1731 kam es zu Erbstreitigkeiten zwischen den Herrschaftslinien Oettingen-Wallerstein und Oettingen-Spielberg, die erst um 1740 abgeschlossen waren. Um 1740 ist in der Schneidheimer Amtsgeldrechnung die Rede von "erkauften zimmerischen Gefällen". Es kann vermutet werden, dass die zimmerischen Gefälle hierbei wohl zunächst an Oettingen-Wallerstein gefallen waren, dann jedoch von Oettingen-Spielberg zur Arrondierung der Steuerverhältnisse in Kleinerdingen gekauft wurden ? (siehe hierzu auch AR 1796/97)
- Die Kleinerdingler Judenschutzzgelder wurden bis 1677 vom Oberamt Wallerstein eingezogen. Der Wechsel zum katholisch gräflichen Oettingen-Spielberg'schen Amt Schneidheim fand dann 1678 statt. Vermutlich hat Oettingen-Wallerstein zu diesem Zeitpunkt diese Gefälle an Oettingen-Spielberg verkauft. Ab 1700 bis ca 1710 stehen die Kleinerdingler Juden in der Amtsgeldrechnung des kath. Oberamts Oettingen neben den Oettinger und Halsfarther Juden.

WO STEHEN DIE LISTEN 1678 BIS 1700 ??? IM AMT SCHNEIDHEIM ???
